Keynote Address

Muddying the Waters: Co-Authoring Feminisms Across Scholarship and Activism

This keynote lecture focuses on some of the most heart-wrenching questions about knowledge production. Working from sites as diverse as the university classrooms in the US, the streets of the Tanzanian capital of Dar es Salaam, and the farms and development offices in the villages of Sitapur district in North India, this talk highlights and embodies the labor and politics of translation and genre blending in research and writing that cross multiple and difficult borders. Nagar intervenes in the debates around scholarship and its relationship with activism by exploring how a focus on radical vulnerability might allow us to imagine co-authorship across socio-political, geographical, linguistic and institutional borders.
